Community-Based BIBLIOTHERAPY

1st meeting: April 18 at 5:30pm

We will discuss

Where The Heart Is by Billie Letts

Bibliotherapy uses books as a way to promote positive change and healing.

Community-Based Bibliotherapy can involve using books and community supports to form an innovative support group and strengthen interpersonal relationships, resiliency, and hope.

Each month we will read a book and discuss how we can apply aspects of the book to our lives; looking at the characters' decisions, obstacles, and healing journey within the book. We will work together as a group to support one another and share experiences as well as our reactions to reading and embark on our own journeys together to learn, grow, heal, and embrace life as it comes.

This program is free. Registration is requested, but not required.

Sarah Falkson is a Licensed Professional Counselor, a Clinical Trauma Specialist, and a member of the National Board of Certified Counselors. She has worked in the field for over 15 years and has a strong passion for working with and advocating for individuals who have experienced trauma.

JOURNAL PROMPTS

Looking to get more out of your reading?
Try journaling!

Think of a book you read recently that resonated with you (good or bad) and answer the following prompts :

- If you could create the perfect award that fits this book, what would that award be?
- If this book were to be adapted into a movie, which actors and actresses (dead or alive) would you choose to portray the characters?
- If you were to create a playlist based off this book, what are the songs you would select and why?
